

Australia and New Zealand

Dear Bookseller,

Our list this Spring is the largest and, I believe, much the strongest that we have ever published. In each area, it builds on recent successes, but it is also our most inventive list, reaching into almost every sector of the market.

The Gift list is as exciting as ever and we're all set to take the roaring success of our Bingos to the next level with a uniquely Australian title, Australia's Deadly Animals. We have a large number of new formats, such as Wild Bunch, a reinvention of the Crazy Eights game, using animals instead of numbers. We have followed the huge success of Tattoo Tarot, with Movie Tarot, which shows how film stars' greatest roles fit perfectly into Tarot archetypes. Poo Bingo takes one of the most popular gifts of 2019, Who Did This Poo?, into the bestselling bingo series.

We launch a new series on modern and contemporary artists, Art File, with a book by Jonathan Jones on Tracey Emin. The series of beautiful, small gift biographies, Lives of the Artists, continues with Frida Kahlo, another very popular woman artist. This theme is continued in The Short Story of Women Artists, a brilliantly synoptic account of how women have changed the course of art by engaging with the female condition. Our fascination with the macabre is explored in a number of books including Anatomica: The Exquisite and Unsettling Art of Human Anatomy, which shows through illustration the growing understanding of the workings of the human body from the Renaissance onwards.

100 Things to Do in a Forest and How to Grow your Dinner Without Leaving the House touch in a light and engaging way on powerful themes in contemporary life. Night Vision: A Field Guide to Your Dreams is a particularly beautifully illustrated, but informative, book that makes a perfect present for a friend or indeed yourself.

In the Children's list, Marion Deuchars has revived her series of brilliant activity books with two more—Let's Make Some Great Art: Animals and Patterns. Einstein's Theory of Relativity is the first book in an ambitious series: Words that Changed the World. The History of Everything in 32 Pages is just that. From Big Bang, through the creation of the solar system and life on earth, to the human story, it provides a humanist creation myth.

Last, we are reissuing as a small gift book Virginia Woolf's How Should One Read a Book? which answers a question that must be fundamental to every book buyer and reader.

Anatomica

The Exquisite and Unsettling Art of Human Anatomy

Joanna Ebenstein

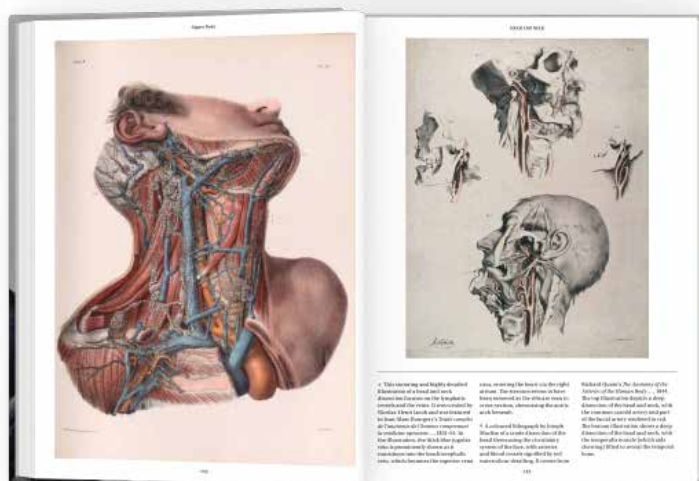

- Visually strong collection of illustrations given prominence for the first time in a book
- Anatomical illustration is frequently referenced in contemporary visual culture: this is the ultimate source
- Great subject for artists, medics and above all, enthusiasts of macabre subject matter

For centuries, humankind has sought to know itself through an understanding of the body, in sickness and in health, inside and out. This fascination left in its wake a rich body of artworks that demonstrate not only the facts of the human body, but also the ways in which our ideas about the body and its proper representation have changed over time. Considered both beautiful and repulsive, illustrated anatomy continues to hold our interest today and is frequently referenced in popular culture. Anatomica brings together some of the most striking, fascinating and bizarre artworks from the 16th through to the 20th century, exploring human anatomy in one beautiful volume.

AUTHOR Joanna Ebenstein is an internationally recognised expert in the art of anatomy and creator of the Morbid Anatomy blog, library and event series. Her books include Death: A Graveside Companion and The Anatomical Venus.

Francis Bacon, by Ian Berry
London, UK, 1967

Francis Bacon, a self-portrait series, captures a conversation with 'Three Studies for Figures at the Base of a Crucifixion' when it was first shown in London in 1946. It was showing in his first home and workshop, now in the remarkable aftermath of war. While many other artists of that time were struggling to find a new way to express their inner world, Bacon was already a master of his craft, capturing the human condition in a way that was both powerful and haunting.

In the 1950s, Bacon was a leading figure in the London art scene. He was known for his bold, expressive style and his ability to capture the human condition in a way that was both powerful and haunting. He was a man who was not afraid to show his inner world, and his art reflected this. He was a man who was not afraid to show his inner world, and his art reflected this.

On the day of the shoot, Francis Bacon was 'fascinated' by the artist's way of working. 'I was fascinated by the way he worked, the way he was so open, the way he was so honest. He was a man who was not afraid to show his inner world, and his art reflected this. He was a man who was not afraid to show his inner world, and his art reflected this.'

Francis Bacon's work was a reflection of his inner world, and his art reflected this. He was a man who was not afraid to show his inner world, and his art reflected this.

Yayoi Kusama, by Alex Majoli
Tokyo, Japan, 2016

Alex Majoli photographed Yayoi Kusama, a Japanese artist, in her Tokyo studio. The artist is sitting at a table covered with a white cloth featuring large orange polka dots. She is wearing a red wig and a patterned top. Behind her is a large, abstract artwork with black and white stripes.

'People wear masks and act out in society through this facade, but artists are more vulnerable, they aren't hiding from anything. Kusama was not afraid of the way she would be portrayed by me.' Alex Majoli

Frida Kahlo

Lives of the Artists (Series)

Hettie Judah

- Part of 'Lives of the Artists' series: highly readable short biographies of the most popular artists
- Frida Kahlo led an incredible life and is a hugely popular and well-known artist
- Beautifully designed, edited and packaged, these books are a fantastic option for those who are curious about the lives of these great artists and make a lovely gift

Fridamania has made Frida Kahlo's image ubiquitous: she has been reborn as a Halloween costume, Barbie doll, children's book character, textile print, phone cover and the inspiration for everything from cocktails to fashion shoots. But it is more difficult to get a clear vision of this bold and brilliant, foul-mouthed, heavy-drinking, hard-smoking, husband-stealing, occasionally bisexual, often bed-bound, wheelchair-using, needy, forthright and passionate woman. Hettie Judah sets out to correct that with this superb biography of one of the most charismatic artists of the last 100 years.

AUTHOR Hettie Judah is senior art critic on The I and contributor to The Guardian, The New York Times and many other publications, books and exhibition catalogues. She regularly talks about art and with artists, hosting conversations and discussions at museums and galleries. She is the author of the guide Art London, 2019.

The Short Story of Women Artists

A Pocket Guide to Key Breakthroughs, Movements, Works and Themes

Susie Hodge

- A new and innovative approach to the fascinating history of women artists, from the 16th century to the present
- Explores the key artists and their works, but also details the most important themes and movements as well as the milestone historical breakthroughs that women artists have made
- The book for students, enthusiasts and gallery-goers to understand the complete story of women artists

The Short Story of Women Artists tells the full history—from the breakthroughs that women have made in pushing for parity with male artists, to the important contributions made to otherwise male-dominated artistic movements and the forgotten and obscured artists who are now being rediscovered and reassessed. Accessible, concise and richly illustrated, the book reveals the connections between different periods, artists, and styles, giving readers a thorough understanding and broad enjoyment of the full achievements that female artists have made.

AUTHOR Susie Hodge is an art historian, historian and artist. She is the bestselling author of numerous books, among them The Short Story of Art and The Short Story of Modern Art.

Pottering

A Cure for Modern Life

Anna McGovern,
illustrations by Charlotte Ager

- A good fit for the 'happiness' sections of the stores
- Pottering has its own place alongside the concepts of mindfulness and flow, with the idea of freeing your mind and living with acceptance
- An enjoyable and entertaining read from a strong authorial voice

This little book is both a discussion and practical guide to pottering. Author Anna McGovern writes with charm about the joy and practicality of living in the meandering moment, not asking too much of yourself and yet still getting things done in the gentlest of ways. This is the book for people who want to discover productivity at an easier pace and above all the contentment you achieve when accepting that you can only do what you can do. A true ode to slow living and an antidote to the stresses of modern life.

AUTHOR Anna is a digital producer. After applying for a job and not getting an interview, she decided on a part-time career break one day a week to recharge and potter and found the power and pleasure in not doing very much. This is her first book.

How to Grow Your Dinner Without Leaving the House

Claire Ratnón

- Growing your own vegetables, even without access to gardens and allotments, appeals to people seeking a more sustainable and self-sufficient lifestyle
- This is the ideal next stage for people who have taken to growing plants
- Carries the strong promise of How to Raise a Plant with the same fresh and gift-worthy approach

A vegetable garden is not an option for everyone, and so container growing has become desirable for people with little outside space. Many have discovered the love of growing houseplants and want to take their skills to another level; others are inspired by the idea of growing their own food organically and sustainably. The book covers all the essentials of growing a range of edible plants in pots, and meeting each crop's specific needs. Author Claire Ratnón brings her urban food growing expertise to this popular subject, to encourage readers to grow their own dinner, even if they've only got a window box or balcony to work with.

AUTHOR Claire Ratnón is an organic food grower who's worked in a range of roles from growing crops for Ottolenghi's restaurant, Rovi, to delivering food growing workshops. Claire has also written and created content for Waitrose Food Magazine, Bloom, The Modern House, The Garden Museum and BBC Radio 4's Gardeners' Question Time.

Mono-ha

Mono-ha, usually translated as 'school of things', was a movement in mid-1960s Japanese and Korean art that valued the dialogue between organic and artificial materials, which were treated simply and placed in subtle and sensitive installations. Mono-ha works of art used natural objects like rocks, soil and water, often juxtaposed with sheets of steel or glass. The effect is minimal in aesthetic and contemplative in tone. These were works that stood apart from the international art market: mono-ha works were often ephemeral and depended on the viewer's experience with the objects in space.

Bauhaus

The Bauhaus was one of the most celebrated and influential art schools in history. Based in a number of German cities - Weimar, then Dessau, then Berlin - the Bauhaus took a radical approach to art education, fusing fine art with crafts, design and architecture. Its aesthetic was generally stripped-down, geometric and industrial. The Bauhaus was founded between the two world wars and was finally shut down by the Nazis in 1933, whereupon many of its most influential members fled to other countries, where their influence spread. Perhaps most notable is its influence in the United States, where Bauhaus émigrés permanently transformed American architecture.

- Includes more contemporary examples and greater digital presence throughout
- New assignments and design refreshed for enhanced relevance and readability

Taking a practical approach to colour, Colour: A Workshop for Artists and Designers is an invaluable resource for art students and professionals alike. With its sequence of specially designed assignments and in-depth discussions, it effectively bridges the gap between colour theory and practice to inspire confidence and understanding in anyone working with colour. This third edition is updated with more contemporary examples drawn not just from painting, but from textiles, graphic design, illustration and animation. An expanded discussion of digital techniques, new assignments and a refreshed design have all been brought together to create a highly readable and relevant text.

AUTHOR David Hornung is Professor of Art at Adelphi University in Garden City, New York. He has exhibited his paintings in many solo and group exhibitions in the US and UK.

Draping: The Complete Course

Second Edition

Karolyn Kiisel

- Revised and updated edition of a bestselling publication with 40 video tutorials including 10 brand new ones
- Draping is an essential skill for all fashion designers
- Projects based on iconic designs of key garments (classic, contemporary and costume) taken from global dress or inspired by film

Draping – the art of using muslin to design directly on a mannequin – is an essential skill for fashion students. Covering the most basic to more advanced techniques, this series of master classes provides a complete course. Starting with the basics of preparing the mannequin and fabric, the book advances through pinning, trimming and clipping and creating shape using darts and tucks, to adding volume using pleats and gathers and handling complex curves. Advanced skills include how to use support elements and how to handle bias draping. Each skill and technique throughout the book is explained with step-by-step photographs and line drawings that bring to life the art of creating womenswear in three dimensions.

AUTHOR Karolyn Kiisel is currently teaching costume at the historic Theater Academy of Los Angeles City College, California and taught in the fashion department at Otis College of Art and Design in Los Angeles for over 20 years. Her fashion designs have been sold internationally and her costume work has appeared widely on screen and stage.

Designing Type

Second Edition

Karen Cheng

- Specific and comprehensive guide to type design
- Lavishly illustrated with type specimens and diagrams drawn from a wide range of classic and contemporary examples
- This second edition has been updated to include more on the creative process of designing typefaces

Designing Type is a comprehensive guide to type design, often hailed as a 'must-have' for typographers, graphic designers and students. In this revised edition, the author provides more in-depth discussion of the processes behind developing typefaces and the basic issues that need to be taken into consideration such as visual principles and letter construction, optical compensation and legibility and the relationships between letters and shapes in a font. The book's design has been refreshed with the introduction of more contemporary typefaces, more explanatory diagrams and a closer connection between text and corresponding image.

AUTHOR Karen Cheng is professor in the Visual Communication Design programme at the University of Washington in Seattle where she teaches type design and typography. She is a professional designer and her work has been published in Communication Arts, Print and ID Journal.

CHIMERA

Fire-breathing monster that's part lion, part goat and part serpent

One of the deadliest monsters of Greek mythology, the Chimera was a goat, fire-breathing lion, the head and body of a lion, a goat's head on her back and a serpentine snail for a tail.

The Chimera was said to live in the mountainous land of Lycia, where she terrorized the whole country, devouring villages and farms with her fiery breath. To see her, even if you were lucky enough to survive the encounter, was an omen that a disaster, such as a killer volcanic eruption, was coming.

Many heroes tried to kill this formidable creature, but it seemed an impossible task. As soon as they came close enough to attack her, she killed them with a jet of flames.

However, in one story, King Iobates of Lycia asked the hero Bellerophon to get rid of the Chimera for him. To help Bellerophon, the goddess Athena agreed that Pegasus, the winged horse of the gods, could carry him to Lycia.

Bellerophon prepared for the attack by fixing a heap of lead to the tip of his spear. He flew high above the monster on Pegasus's back, so that the flames could not reach him, and took aim. He hurled the spear at the Chimera's gaping mouth. As it plunged into her throat, her breath melted the lead, choking her to death.

ANANSI AND THE BOX OF STORIES

As Anansi the spider looked around at the world, he realized something was missing. There were no stories! The people had no tales to tell one another around the fire at night. Anansi's father, the sky god Nyame, was keeping them all to himself, locked inside a box in his kingdom in the heavens. Anansi decided to get the box, and give the stories to the world.

He spun a long thread of silk, and climbed up to the heavens to tell to Nyame, "Great Nyame," he said, "I have come to ask you for the box of stories."

"Hoarse!" said Nyame. "You can have the box, but only if you can catch these things and bring them to me. They are Osei the python, Osei the leopard and Mboro the swarm of hornets."

As Nyame knew, these creatures were all extremely dangerous and difficult to catch. He was sure Anansi would fail. But Anansi was determined.

First, he approached Osei, the giant python. While hiding a large stick, he said to himself: "Oh no, the man is wrong. The man Osei is longer than that!"

"What are you talking about?" asked the python, turning to see Anansi. "Oh, hello Osei," he said. "It's just that my wife says you're not as long as this stick."

"OF COURSE I am!" Osei hissed.

"But how can I prove it?" Anansi asked. "I want you to lie alongside the stick, and I'll measure you."

Keen to prove his great length, the python stretched out next to the stick. Quick as a flash, Anansi spun his silk around their both, holding Osei tight.

"You tricked me!" growled Osei, as Anansi pulled him up to the heavens to show Nyame.

Next, Anansi found Osei, the fierce leopard. Standing behind her, he said: "How can they say that about Osei? Surely she's the cleverest animal in the forest."

"How can they say WHAT about me?" Osei growled, turning to see Anansi holding a large sack. "Oh, hello Osei," Anansi said. "It's just that people are saying you're not clever enough to appear into this sack."

"What nonsense," said Osei. "Of course I can." The spring from the rock into the sack. Anansi quickly spun his silk around it, tying it tight.

"You tricked me," Anansi said. Osei roared, as Anansi hauled her up to the heavens.

Finally, Anansi filled a large pot with water, and poured it all over the hornets' nest.

"What's going on?" inquired the hornets from inside. "Is it rainy season already?"

"Don't worry!" said Anansi. "I've brought you this pot to shelter in."

"Oh, thank you, spider!" said the hornets, flying into the pot. At once, Anansi spun his silk over the opening, sealing it tight.

"You tricked me!" the hornets cried from inside the pot, as Anansi carried it up to the heavens.

Nyame had to admit defeat. "Well done, little spider," he said. He handed Anansi a small, empty wooden box, and when Anansi lifted the lid, out spilled all the stories, tumbling down to the ground below and spreading to every land. And now the world is full of stories, thanks to Anansi the spider.

Plantfulness

or how to change your life with plants

Julie Rose Bower & Jonathan Kaplan, illustrations by Grace Helmer

- The houseplant trend keeps growing
- Tips on how to help plants thrive and how to choose the best plants for you
- This gift focuses on the mind, body, spirit angle of raising plants: how plants can improve your well-being

Not just a guide to keeping your plants alive and happy (though we've got that covered), Plantfulness is about finding the perfect plant for you! These cards will guide you through 50 houseplants that can give back in a symbiotic relationship in which you both thrive. From practical benefits (cleaner air, stunning scents) to emotional ones (creative inspiration, a sense of resilience, an appreciation of the transient beauty of the world), Plantfulness brings mindfulness to indoor gardening, helping you become one with nature, no matter how busy or plant-phobic you are.

AUTHOR Grace Helmer is a Brighton-born, London-based illustrator and artist. Jonathan Kaplan works as a clinical psychologist with expertise in cognitive behavioural therapy and the application of mindfulness and meditation to psychotherapy.

The Wine Game

A Card Game for Wine Lovers

Zeren Wilson,
illustrations by Cassandre Montoriol Alaux

- Distinguish your Bordeaux from your Burgundy and your Chianti from your Champagne – this fun card game provides an easy and amusing way to learn about wine varieties
- Includes 2 packs of cards: red and white, to play separately or together
- Based on Happy Families, this card game is simple to play, even while sampling your favourite wines

Learn about wines from all over the world in this deluxe happy families game. With two decks of cards – one for red wines, one for whites – covering all the major wine-producing regions and some unexpected gems, this is the perfect way to dip in to the world of wine. Includes a booklet with brief descriptions of each region along with some tips on which labels to look out for.

AUTHOR UK-based French artist Cassandre Montoriol's traditional ink and crayon drawings are the toast of the fashion publishing world. Her expressive, hand-drawn aesthetic is reminiscent of travel diaries, fashion illustration and textile design.

Zeren Wilson has spent 17 years in the wine trade, most recently selling wine to London restaurants and now consults for restaurant wine lists.
